Colleen Castille

Colleen Castille's excellence as a public servant is well established. After stints at the Departments of Insurance and Education, she became Chief Cabinet Aide to Gov. Jeb Bush, specializing in environmental issues. This led to her appointment as Secretary of the Department of Community Affairs, where Colleen supervised community growth and rehabilitation, disaster planning, local and state comprehensive planning, and affordable housing provisions. In 2004, she was named to her current post, overseeing Florida's environmental regulatory and law enforcement programs, the acquisition and management of public lands – including Florida's award-winning state parks – and the development and regulation of water resources.

Colleen is a strong supporter of community colleges. She gave the commencement address at TCC's Spring 2005 graduation ceremony. Sec. Castille and her husband, Georgia businessman Jesse Bostick, love hiking and kayaking in Florida's wilderness.
